What is the difference between My Media and Media Gallery? (legacy)

Content updated: 10/19/2020

My Media: My Media is your personal media storage. It is different for each user because it shows media you have uploaded or created over time. The same “My Media” list is available to you from each course, and items in My Media can be published in one or more courses. Items in My Media are private to you until they are published somewhere. You can also add other users as collaborators on your media from within My Media.

Media Gallery: The Media Gallery is private to the course you are in. Everyone enrolled in that course can see what’s published to the Media Gallery. Multiple people in the course can contribute to the Media Gallery depending on the way the admin setup the course.

Embedding Videos: When you embed a video in a course, you’re usually choosing it from My Media or Media Gallery, as well as Shared Repository or Playlists. So it depends on where the video is stored, but in most cases, it’s coming from your My Media list unless you choose something from the course’s Media Gallery or another source.
