Changing the language within the room only affects that session. Once you exit the room, the language reverts to the default, as set from where you launched the meeting (ie. KMS/KAF/Smart.newrow.com).

Set Your Default Displayed Language

The default language that you see in your Virtual Classroom depends on the default language set in the host location (ie. from where you opened the room - KMS, KAF or Smart.newrow.com).

For example, if you are opening the room from your KMS, and your KMS has English as the main language, the Virtual Classroom will be displayed in English as default.

Or, if Deutsch is set in your user profile in smart.newrow.com, and you are entering a Virtual Classroom from smart.newrow.com, the room will display in Deutsch.

In KMS

You can change the language for your user interface in KMS in your current browser, so that each time your open your Virtual Classroom it will maintain that language. See Changing Mediaspace Language.

In KAF

In KAF-based LMS, the language in the Virtual Classroom will be set according to the local language set by the user in the LMS settings. See How to change your KAF language.
